Presenting Complaint: Headache

Possible Medical Condition: Tension-type headache or migraine. Consideration of other differential diagnoses such as cluster headaches and sinusitis should be based on further evaluation.

Severity Analysis: Mild to moderate, given the patient's symptom description alone without additional pain intensity metrics provided. However, a precise assessment would require more detailed inquiry into the character of the pain (e.g., throbbing vs. pressing), duration and frequency, associated features such as nausea or sensitivity to light/sound, etc.

Possible Causes: Stress-related muscle tension is common; however, other etiologies like dehydration, eye strain from excessive screen time without proper breaks (digital eyestrain), hormonal changes or imbalances could also be considered.

Maintain adequate hydration throughout the day, ensure proper ergonomics during work activities that involve prolonged screen time, and limit exposure to loud noises or bright lights if these are identified as triggers for his head
